Dear Mr Ashcroft,

This letter is to show my support for the pending settlement of the Microsoft Anti-trust case. The compromise represents a fair resolution to this legal dispute. It has gone on long enough.

Microsoft has made the Computer easy to use and the breakup of this great company is a poor decision to make. The proposed settlement provides flexibility for computer makers with uniform licensing, rights to re-configure Windows with other programs, abilities to license Microsoft technologies and to have access to the Windows internal code.

With these conditions in place Microsoft's rivals will have ample opportunity to carry on their own operations and will allow Microsoft to operate without further disruption, which of course, will be an asset to the computer consumer and the current struggling economy. Don't breakup this fine company that has put the world at our fingertips.

Sincerely,

Richard S. Murchy
